STAMP CLUB NEWS

- The APS slide show featuring the World's Early Air Mail Stamps shown at the December 5th meeting was very informative. The APS has over 150 specialty slide shows available; I'll bet there are several you would love to see. Contact Mike O'Reilly with your special topic requests.
- Membership dues are payable at the first club meeting in January. If you are unable to attend in January please send $12.00 per individual or $15.00 per family to the club treasurer.
- We are saddened to report the recent passing of Walter Thompson, Jr. who became a member just last year. Our best wishes to Walter's daughter and club member, Carolyn Blalock.

HUNTSPEX 2007 NEWS

- A motion was presented and approved to introduce a "Philatelic Passport" program at HUNTSPEX 2007 to bring new members into the club. This consists of a small booklet that stamp show attendees present to dealers at the bourse, get rubber stamped images in the corresponding spaces, and earn a years free membership by returning a completed booklet.
- Mike O'Reilly reports dealer tables are almost sold out for HUNTSPEX 2007, with strong leads on those remaining. This year's show is again off to a great start.
- The theme for HUNTSPEX 2007 is the 10th Anniversary of Mars Pathfinder and the landing of Sojourner.

Oklahoma Statehood

Oh, what a beautiful stamp! In January, the Postal Service will celebrate the 100th birthday of Oklahoma's statehood with the issuance of the Oklahoma Statehood stamp in Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma became the 46th state on Nov. 16, 1907. The stamp is a painting by Oklahoma artist Mike Larsen. In the painting, morning sunlight touches the waters of the Cimarron, one of several rivers that meander through the state. Featured in the right corner of the stamp design are the words, "Oh, what a beautiful mornin'...", a popular song from the musical Oklahoma!, by Rodgers and Hammerstein.

For many people, the name "Cimarron" conjures up images of the Old West. Along the banks of this storied river ran the southern branch of the Santa Fe Trail — one of the most heavily traveled wagon roads to the West (1821-1880). In the years following the Civil War, Texas cowboys drove millions of cattle across the Cimarron as they made their way north to Kansas along the Chisholm Trail. And in 1889, would-be settlers poured across the river in the first of several government-sponsored "land runs." Renowned author Edna Ferber featured this land run in her acclaimed novel Cimarron (1929), which was later made into an Oscar-winning film.

When President Theodore Roosevelt signed a proclamation to admit Oklahoma to the Union, the action merged two entities: the Indian Territory, which included members of more than 60 indigenous and relocated Native American groups, and the Oklahoma Territory, home to numerous non-Indian settlers, many of whom had taken part in several land runs sponsored by the federal government in the late 19th century.

Today, descendants of those early residents, along with more recent arrivals, make up a population of about 3.5 million. More than half a million people live in Oklahoma City, which is the state capital and the largest city. The next largest city, Tulsa, is home to almost 400,000 residents. Located on the Arkansas River, Tulsa is also the site of one of the busiest river ports in the nation.

Through the years, the people of Oklahoma have made many contributions to our nation's heritage. "From the Native Americans who first settled this land to the Boomers and Sooners who hoped to sow better lives in the tallgrass prairie," wrote Governor Brad Henry in October 2004, "Oklahomans have always been pioneers, overcoming obstacles through talent, ingenuity and determination."

Famous citizens of the past include humorist Will Rogers, of Cherokee descent; Olympic champion Jim Thorpe, of Sauk and Fox descent; folksinger/songwriter Woody Guthrie; baseball great Mickey Mantle; writer Ralph Ellison, and astronaut Gordon Cooper. Among today's Oklahoma-born notables are country music stars Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, and Reba McEntire; actors Chuck Norris and Brad Pitt; and journalist Bill Moyers. Oklahomans continue to excel in many other fields as well, including education, business, finance, science, medicine, aviation, and aerospace.

Oklahomans enjoy a thriving economy based largely on agriculture, service industries, and oil and gas. Tourism is also important, with visitors drawn to a wealth of natural wonders, historic sites and cultural offerings. These include the Wichita Mountains in the southwest; the Ouachita National Forest in the southeast; the Cherokee Heritage Center south of Tahlequah; Sequoyah's Home Site near Sallisaw; the Oklahoma History Center and the National Cowboy & Western Heritage Museum, both in Oklahoma City, and the Gilcrease Museum and Philbrook Museum of Art in Tulsa.
